

Procedure for Treating Heart Disease Starts in School Malda

Malda District has conducted, a special training session on CPR (Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation) was held at Malda. This special procedure, to help patients suffering from heart disease recover through primary treatment, is taught hands-on to the students. This training was given to the 12th-grade students of one of the district's most renowned institutions, Ramakrishna Mission Vivekananda Vidya Mandir.

“This CPR can bring a critically ill patient back to life. It is possible to give a new life to any person found unconscious on the streets by administering CPR. The initiative taken by the District Inspector of Schools (Secondary), with the help of the district administration, to teach CPR to school students deserves praise.”

The Principal of Ramakrishna Mission Vivekananda Vidya Mandir, Swami Tattwarupananda, said, “The role of the district administration is truly praiseworthy. This type of training camp should be held in every school. It is possible to save a person suffering from a heart attack through CPR, and the students were able to learn that hands-on today.”

The goal is to make the 12th-grade students aware of this procedure. Later, students of other classes will also be made aware. We have made a beginning today. In the coming days, such camps may be organized in other schools as well.”
